

Screening for Plagiarism

The concept of plagiarism is determined as follows

Plagiarism – promulgation (publication), fully or partially, of another's work under the name of a person who is not the author of this work.

Self-plagiarism (re-publishing) – of large text parts from own scientific papers by the author without stating the fact of their prior or simultaneous publication.

Textual plagiarism – full or partial copying of text fragments (modified or not) in the articles, theses, reports, books, manuscripts, theses, and so on.

The following actions clearly characterize the process of plagiarism:

- * turning in someone else's work as your own;
- * copying another person's words or ideas without reference to its work;
- * intentional omission of the quote from the reference list;
- * providing incorrect source data (such as "broken" links);
- * changing words order, while preserving the overall structure of a sentence;
- * copying large parts of text or ideas that makes up the majority of new article.

Plagiarism is classified in the following categories:

- * the exact verbatim copying (Copy & Paste) without a proper bibliographic reference to the borrowed fragments;
- * copying with modifications in language, vocabulary and technological interpretation (the words switching, replacing letters, numbers, etc.);
- * style plagiarism;
- * translation from another language;
- * idea plagiarism.
